Free ESC Congress 2010 registration for young cardiologists

The ESC is acutely aware of the need to train and educate cardiology trainees at a European level, in order to ensure the progress of cardiology and related sciences over time. With this objective in mind, the Congress Programme Committee (CPC) has developed a dynamic new programme that will allow cardiologists-in-training, or junior cardiologists, under the age of 35, to fully benefit from all that the ESC Congress has to offer. By giving them this unique opportunity to meet with the entire community, we will not only strengthen links between the ESC and its National and Affiliate Societies but also ensure that younger colleagues recognise, appreciate and associate with our activities, both now and in the future.

The ESC has committed to offering free registration (a registration worth up to =80 820) to all such individuals wishing to attend the congress for the first time. This registration includes an annual online subscription to the European Heart Journal or Cardiovascular Research Journal.

We invite you to select deserving young professionals and seek financial support for their travel and accommodation expenses from local industry and institutes. When you send us the names and contact details of the people you identify, we will register them and suggest appropriately priced accommodation.

We trust that this pioneering initiative will be met with the enthusiasm and foresight that you have always shown. We personally thank you for your continued support.

With our kind regards,

Prof. Roberto Ferrari, FESC, ESC President

Prof. Fausto Pinto, FESC, CPC Chairperson
