Last few days for early bird discount

Greetings All

This is the final newsletter for this year and is the last call to those who have not yet made use of the early bird discount on registration fees. This discounted fee will not be available after 30th November.

The response to date has been outstanding, so even more reason for you to encourage your colleagues to avail themselves of this opportunity and attend.....there are very few days remaining.

Good news is that we have managed to accredit 18 CPD points with the SA Health Professionals Council for medical doctors attending the conference. We will hand out these certificates at the conference, which foreign delegates may use to approach their medical professional bodies for accreditation.

We are hurtling towards the end of the year and Christmas is traditionally a time of year when the construction business takes an annual holiday in South Africa.

With FIFA 2010 taking place though, it is all hands on deck and the city is a hive of activity as construction firms make every effort to complete all the amenities well before the actual event.

The Cape Town international airport has gone through a major upgrade and the new terminal buildings and roads networks are being opened in phases with final handover in March 2010.

This means virtually all the upgrades will have been commissioned and operational in February

2010 and this should ensure that your arrival in Cape Town will be an even more special experience.

Just down the road from the Cape Town Convention Centre where the conference is being held, is the new football stadium, The Cape Town Stadium. Eight FIFA 2010 matches will be played here. So for those of you passionate about the sport, delight yourself with a visit to this modern marvel of construction....you will not be disappointed.

On the security front, security personnel numbers have been beefed up considerably ensuring an extremely safe environment.

Lastly, for all those delegates and potential delegates who celebrate Christmas, the Local Organising Committee of ICLAM 2010 would like to wish you all a very blessed one and an extremely prosperous new year.

See you in Cape Town in February!
